A Cow Thief Arrested.

R. Wilson silas Dave Wilson, was arrested yesterlay morning by Sergeant Tarplay on suspicion of having stolen a cow. He had just closed the sale of the animal to a Central avenue butcher for 5t. He was taken to colles headquarters, where the fiservies had an interesting time interviewing him. The interview ran like this:

"Where is your home?"

"In fall the greater part of the time."

"Where lid you get the cow you sold?"

"I stole it."

"Now that is not answering my question," replied the chief. "I know you stole it, but from whom?"

"Well, that's none of your business, and if you want to find out who I stole the cow from you will have to learn that the best way you can. What do you take me for—a bureau of information for the benefit of the — police? You can't scare me with all the brass buttons in town. I wasn't born in the woods to be frightened at a crow."

Chief Servies became very wrathy with his unusually ugly prisoner and ordered him locked up. In the afternoon he was The Journal
